

---

Hoarding Favorites

Posted by Horan - 2008/05/09 17:33

---

Greetings

I've assembled quite a collection of craft beers. A standout favorite is hard to say as I enjoy almost all of the ones I try. Right now I'm enjoying some Sierra Nevada Bigfoot. Barleywine style ale. I was wondering if beer can be kept or stored for any length of time. Like a year. I know....drink it!! But to save a case of seasonal or special brews would be nice for special gatherings or occasions. Any idea if this is possible? I've purchased beers I really liked only to find it unavailable the next week. Any ideas? Thanks Tom

=====

Re:Hoarding Favorites

Posted by Sabrina - 2008/05/11 19:16

---

I can tell you that I am a fan of holiday (seasonal) beers like Maritime Pacific's Jolly Roger so, I have purchased several cases that I have parceled out over a years ( and often more that 12 months) time. I have not yet been disappointed. ... Love those holiday brews in July!

=====

Re:Hoarding Favorites

Posted by KING__SIZE - 2008/05/14 09:40

---

De Dolle Stille Nacht, ages well, tough to find.

Alaskan Brewing Company, Smoked Porter. It's really good, but you'll need patience. I buy a few every year and do a tasting panel with some friends. It's always on my Christmas list.

=====